The Burke Center for Youth is a non-profit that opened in 1973 as a residential treatment center providing therapeutic experiences and treatment services in Driftwood. Caring for the most underserved population, today, up to 30 boys and young men in foster care from throughout Texas call the BCFY home. Abused, neglected and often homeless, most of these boys have experienced significant trauma, require a specialized level of care, and can now begin a complex healing process and a new path forward.
